

A photograph of the Oak Alley Plantation entrance. A long, straight brick path leads from the foreground towards a large, two-story white plantation house with a portico supported by columns. The path is flanked by rows of massive, ancient oak trees with thick, gnarled trunks and dense green foliage, creating a natural tunnel effect. The sky is bright and slightly overcast.

OAK ALLEY
PLANTATION
A NATIONAL HISTORIC LANDMARK

THE DEEP SOUTH'S MOST SPECTACULAR ANTEBELLUM SETTING

The story of this National Historic Landmark begins with the trees. In the early 1700's, an unknown settler planted twenty-eight evenly spaced oak trees in two rows leading from his humble cottage toward the mighty Mississippi River. In 1839, Jacques T  l  sphore Roman, a wealthy Creole sugar cane planter, lured his young bride from New Orleans to the plantation by building this spectacular mansion. The opulence of her home has been authentically restored to its original grandeur. Enjoy Oak Alley's beauty and dream of her rich past while you step back in time as we tell you of Jacques' struggle between his love for the land and his love for his wife.

Located within an hour's drive of New Orleans or Baton Rouge, Oak Alley Plantation, crowned the "Grande Dame of the Great River Road," is admired as one of the most spectacular antebellum settings in the South. After your forty minute, climate controlled, guided tour of the "Big House," stroll the grounds in the shade of majestic oak trees, while sipping one of our famous mint juleps. Come early for a plantation planter's breakfast, indulge in true Creole/Cajun cuisine for lunch in our Restaurant, or grab a quick salad, sandwich or homemade dessert in our Caf  /Ice Cream Parlor. Browse our impressive Gift Shop. Spend a tranquil evening in one of our 19th century cottages. Even plan a wedding, special event or meeting. There is just so much to experience at Oak Alley!
